Description

53 x 29.5 cm

The four panels depicting female saints (56.503, 56.504, 56.505, 56.506) originally belonged to left movable wing of the same winged altarpiece. The painted slats between the pictures and the arrangement of the figures indicate that the images of St Margaret and St. Catherine occupied the upper register of the feast-day side and St. Agnes and St. Dorothy the lower. The separation of the altarpiece wing into four individual panel paintings probably occurred in the 19th century, as this is how the works were listed in the estate inventory of the Ipolyi collection. A significant portion of the upper part of the gold background on the former inner side is overpainted and only two-thirds of the punched frame ornamentation has survived. Perhaps a tracery appliqué decoration appeared above the figures. The figural composition bears conspicuous similarities to that of panel paintings dated to c. 1420 (more recently c. 1430) from the castle of Ober-St-Veit and now in the Dom und Diözesanmuseum in Vienna (Prot. Nr. L. 28-34); the Esztergom pictures, however, may be of a later date.
